

PERI receives EcoVadis Silver Medal for the first time

2026-10-19

Weissenhorn, October 19, 2026. PERI has been awarded a Silver Medal in the 2026 EcoVadis Sustainability Rating for the first time. This places the company among the top 15 percent of approximately 150,000 companies assessed by EcoVadis worldwide.

EcoVadis assesses companies' sustainability performance in four areas: Environment, Labor & Human Rights, Ethics, and Sustainable Procurement. PERI improved its performance in all four categories compared with the previous year.

Various initiatives across the entire PERI Group contributed to this progress. These include the further development of environmental and occupational health and safety management systems, more sustainable procurement practices, the calculation of product carbon footprints, and the definition of climate targets for PERI's own operations and the entire value chain.

Investments at the Weissenhorn Site

In recent years, PERI has also implemented a range of measures at its headquarters in Weissenhorn. These include the new energy-efficient surface coating facility. Other focus areas include the electrification of the company vehicle and forklift fleets, the expansion of photovoltaic systems, and the use of green electricity worldwide.

Sustainability Performance Is Becoming Increasingly Important to Customers

For PERI, the rating is more than an assessment of the company's own sustainability activities. It provides customers and business partners with independent, internationally recognized evidence of the company's sustainability performance. This creates transparency and helps them incorporate sustainability criteria into the selection and evaluation of their suppliers. Such credentials are also playing an increasingly important role in tender processes.
